Much Interest in Exhibit.
Many Rock Island women and girls attended the exhibition and demonstration of sensible shoes at the Y. W. C. A. last evening, when they were shown the style of shoe which is already the fashionable footwear of the east, and which the association is anxious to see become popular here, as a result of their sensible shoe drive.

The demonstrator explained the advantages of the flat heeled, straight-lined broad-toed model, and there was a talk by Dr. Phoebe Pearl on the damage done by improper footwear, which she illustrated with charts and some interesting x-ray slides. These showed the contrast between the foot which is properly fitted with a common-sense shoe and those which have been twisted and arched broken by improperly fitted ones. The four points brought out at the demonstration were the necessity of keeping the straight inner line, the need of flexibility of sole, the comfortableness of the low, broad heel, and the healthfulness of the round toe. Much interest is being shown by local women in the movement.

Party for Summer Girls.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, who also celebrated the second anniversary of their marriage. Covers were laid for only immediate relatives. BOOKS and THINGS

"Every Great Book Is an Action, and Every Great Action Is a Book."—Martin Luther.

"Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs and published by Harper & Brothers in April, continues to be the leading and most popular narrative dealing with the events and especially with psychology of the war, the chapters of observers and commanders, some of the mistakes of both sides, and the psychology of men, both English and German, as well as those of other nations engaged in the conflict, under fire, all are told dispassionately, yet with a wonderfully human and sympathetic touch. His purpose as stated in the preface and again at the conclusion of the volume, "To get deeper into the truth of the war," and "to set down as many aspects of the war's psychology without exaggeration or false emphasis—so that the real truth of the adventure might be seen as it touched the souls of men," is admirably accomplished. The book will without doubt be one of the leading historical authorities on the Great War.

The Macmillan company of New York city has recently published a book, "The American Red Cross in the Great War," written by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the war council of the American Red Cross, which gives an amazing insight to the many and varied activities of the Red Cross organization during the Great War. The book is a urged to take the Seventeenth street road.

The cabinet of the Epworth league of the First Methodist church will meet at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of Richard Ramser, 1222 Nineteenth street.

The estate of John W. Stewart is apportioned among his sons and daughters, according to the terms of the will admitted to probate. To the daughter, Rosabel, is left the household goods and $1,500 in cash, together with the home at 821 Nineteenth street, Rock Island. A watch is left to John Wheeler Stewart, a grandson. A Ford automobile is bequeathed to William, a son. The remainder of the estate is divided equally among the eight children of the deceased. The will is dated Nov. 4, 1913.

Esther Keys is the only beneficiary in the estate of Henry B. Keys, formerly of Rock Island. The will was drawn Feb. 24, 1906.

record of the various phases of Red Cross activities, both at home and abroad, in every belligerent country where there was an opportunity for humane work. The working machinery of the organization, the formation of the motor corps, of the canteens, of base hospitals and station units, provided with medical officers and nurses, of naval auxiliaries, the establishment of convalescent homes at the army camps and of hospitals in the war zone in an effort to "supply every possible lack of the sailor and soldier and to render instant aid in all branches of service," the creation of the "Home Service," the "only existing instrument that could have fulfilled the purpose," the recruiting and equipping of nurses for active service and turning them over to the surgeon general, the creation of the Junior Red Cross, in order "to give the children a share in the nation's business and idealism," these and a multitude of other activities are described with a wealth of accurate detail. But the work of the Red Cross did not stop with the signing of the armistice, nor even with the termination of the war. The formation of a Red Cross league to promote and to preserve peace, and the continuation of Red Cross activities in devastated regions where humane assistance is so greatly needed, are only a part of the work which the organization is still carrying on. All author's royalties on the book go to the Red Cross organization.

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, and published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, is in its seventh edition and continues to be one of the most talked of novels of the day. The book, the author's first, is written with absolutely no regard for the accepted standards of form or method. It is a frank picture of the thoughts and actions of the younger American generation of the present day.
